

La Peau de Chagrin

Who is afraid of shrinking skin

This installation challenged notions of virtual reality by employing hundreds of mirrors as a ceiling, creating an infinite vertical space filled with numerous sculptures. The installation served as a portrait of contemporary life. A striking feature was the presence of approximately 20,000 tiny insect sculptures seemingly crawling across the walls.

Essays by Abhay Sardesai and Kumar Ketkar included.

Year: 2005